

BRILLIANT WEDDING.

The Beautiful Jewish Temple Gay with Flowers and Music

FOR THE RICE-GUNDLING NUPTIALS.

The Event of the Social Season—A Magnificent Reception and Banquet Follows the Impressive Ceremony, and Arion Hall is Thronged with Youth and Beauty.

The new Temple of the Congregation Leshem Shomajim, dedicated last week, was seen last night one of the most brilliant and beautiful marriage ceremonies ever celebrated in Wheeling. Filled with the light of the gas jets and numerous candelabra the temple was even more splendid than in day. It was a fitting place for such a happy ceremony, and the assemblage was in harmony in gay costumes and merry spirits with the brilliance and beauty of the house.

The wedding of Mr. Albert M. Rice and Miss Sadie Gundling has been looked forward to for some time by the leading Jewish society, and the event attracted to the synagogue the most fashionable assemblage seen in Wheeling for many a day. The square on which the synagogue is located was lined with gay and elegant equipages, and many people stood upon the sidewalks admiring the beauty of the exterior of the temple, with its handsome colored windows. A neat canopy had been constructed leading from the street across the sidewalk to the main entrance, to protect the guests from the rain. Even the bad weather could not cast a damper over the joy of the occasion, but merely served to heighten the brilliance of the scene.

Some time before the hour of seven when the celebration of the nuptials was announced to take place, the favored guests began to arrive, and by half past six o'clock the spacious interior of the charming new edifice was well filled. At the end of another half hour, during which time the family and relatives entered and, passed to the seats reserved for them in the front of the church, there was a gathering that completely filled every pew and many were standing in the aisles and vestibule.

The ushers charged with the duty of caring for the guests upon their arrival performed their duties with becoming grace. They were under the supervision of Mr. Charles J. Beckman, who, as master of ceremonies, showed himself the right man for that rather difficult position.

The audience sat patient, but with the restlessness of expectancy always seen on such occasions, until a few minutes past seven, when the Opera House orchestra, stationed in the gallery, began playing the strains of the lovely Mendelssohn march, and the bridal party entered, in the following order: The ushers, Messrs. Bernie Gundling, Philip Kussel, of Rochester, N. Y., Ralph Heyman and Leon H. Stein. They were followed by the bridesmaids, Miss Norma Rice, of Slatington, Pa., and Miss Millie Stein, of New York, and Mr. Albert D. Adler. After them came the most important parties to the sacred contract, the groom leaning on the arm of his father, Mr. M. M. Rice, of Slatington, Pa., and the bride on the arm of her father, Mr. David Gundling, with four ushers bringing up the rear, Mr. Louis Gundling and Mr. L. B. Hamburger, of New York, Mr. H. F. Brilles and Mr. Gabe Emsheimer.

The bridesmaids, groomsmen and ushers, upon reaching the scene of the ceremony, separated, moving to each side of the altar, allowing the bride and groom to occupy the center, where the bride was given to the groom by her father.

The ceremony was performed by Rabbi Bonheim according to the Jewish rites, and was not only beautiful, but very impressive and affecting. All through the ceremony the orchestra rendered sweet music in soft and low strains that floated faintly over the assembly, only to burst out triumphantly in the Tannhauser wedding march at the conclusion.

The charming bride, the central figure of this vision of loveliness, Miss Sadie Gundling is well known in Wheeling society. She has a patrician face, clear cut and expressive, with finely drawn brows and lustrous dark eyes. It is a face that animates in conversation, and there are few more thoroughly agreeable, entertaining and popular ladies in Wheeling. Her charms were enhanced by a magnificent gown of white satin, with corset Bengaline and crystal and pearl trimming, diamond ornaments. She carried a huge bouquet of white lilies and ferns. No bride ever looked lovelier.

Miss Norma Rice, one of the bridesmaids, was arrayed in a handsome toilet of canary fall silk, with chiffon trimmings, and Miss Millie Stein, the other, in pink silk brocade. They made excellent foils to the brilliance of the lovely bride's costume.

The gentlemen attendants were arrayed in the conventional black, all being in full dress, and wore instead of the regulation boutonniere, a white bow, with the initials of the contracting parties worked in gold on each end. Their suits, combined with the handsome toilet of the ladies, against the background of green foliage on the pulpit platform, presented a scene that was picturesque and striking.

On either side of the pulpit were lilies and potted plants, while hydrangeas and smilax at the base of the floral semi-circle added materially to the effect, the pulpit being covered with white satin and silver fringe gracefully entwined in smilax, the whole forming a beautiful symphony of harmonious colors.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the bridal party receded in reverse order, the two fathers bringing up the rear. The recession was to the music of Tannhauser. The composition of the bridal party, even the bride and groom, was generally noted. The bridesmaids and groomsmen performed their duties well, in strict accordance with the best usages, yet with a cool, easy and graceful lack of formal seeming that was as refreshing to witness as it is rare. Immediately after the wedding the bridal party and all the invited guests repaired to the Arion hall, where a big reception was held.

Mr. Albert M. Rice, the groom, is held in favor amongst all circles of society in the city. He is a partner in the firm of A. L. Rice & Co., the Main street milliners, and a young man of sterling worth and business ability. The bride is the eldest daughter of Mr. D. Gundling, the well known clothing. The newly married couple start in life under the most enviable surroundings.

A SPLENDID RECEPTION.

Arion Hall the Scene of a Memorable and Beautiful Ball.

The reception that followed the wedding, at the Arion hall, was one of the finest ever given in the city. The bride and groom stationed themselves with their attendants near the stage, amidst a big bow of potted plants, where they received the congratulations of all present, after which a bounteous and finely prepared wedding supper was served under the supervision of the caterer, Mr. Charles R. Behler, and his able assistant, Dan Cochran, both of whom won golden opinions for the excellence of their service and the beautiful table decorations. No more stylish and creditable banquet was ever served in the city.

The banquet room was tastefully festooned with smilax and flowers. The hall where the dancing took place after the supper was a bower of beauty. The stage was literally massed with palms and cut flowers, while overhead, below the proscenium, hung in huge letters of bright red carnations, the initials, "G. R." About the chandeliers, over the windows, was seen evergreen, the emblem of joy and festivity relieved here and there by choice and appropriate cut flowers.

All the young ladies present were in handsome evening toilets, and the scene in the dancing hall was one of gaiety and splendor.

The music throughout the evening was furnished by the Opera House orchestra, and the most popular pieces of the home were interspersed with the glee and conversation that reigned until an early hour this morning. Mr. and Mrs. Rice were everywhere present, looking after the comfort and entertainment of their guests, and their agreeable presence was everywhere sought. The bride was radiant and gracious, and her presence lent an added charm and kept the brilliant assemblage in the best of spirits.

Mr. and Mrs. Rice departed on an extended bridal tour through the East, the objective points being Boston and New York. They left on the 12:25 train on the Baltimore and Ohio. On their return they will make their home with the bride's father on Chapline street. There was an almost endless array of tokens of love and esteem from their numerous friends, so beautiful in make and design that the friends who called at the house never tired looking at them. It made one of the finest collections of presents that ever graced a wedding in Wheeling. Almost everything useful and ornamental in silver, gold, china, bric-a-brac, cut glass and bronze was displayed.

A number of visitors from other cities were present, among whom were Mr. L. B. Hamburger and Mr. A. Levi, of New York, Mr. M. M. Rice and Miss Norma Rice, of Slatington, Pa., Mr. W. B. Solomon, of Rochester, and Mr. and Mrs. Hertzog, of Pittsburgh.

Hall-Humes.

John D. Hall, of the Hall Printing company, and Miss Lillie Humes were married yesterday evening at the Chapline street M. E. church. After the ceremony, which was performed by F. N. Lynch, the bridal party adjourned to the residence of Mrs. Wilson, at Thirty-first and McCulloch streets, where a reception was held and elegant refreshments served. The bride and groom left on the 10:30 train for the west, where they will remain for nearly a month.

MISSING LOUIS BERTRAND.

He Was Secretary of a Farmers' Alliance and Had a Check.

The INTELLIGENCER yesterday contained an account of the disappearance of Louis Bertrand, of Steinersville, near Powhatan. He was secretary of the Farmers' Alliance there, and had a check for $50 signed by Fred Dorsey. It is thought he may have gone to Washington or Wyoming, as he had friends there and often thought of visiting them. His recent illness may have affected his mind. His relatives and friends are very much distressed about him. He is described as five feet nine inches tall, with brown eyes, brown mustache and brown hair, streaked with gray. He wore when he left home a black coat and vest; jeans pants and blue and white striped cheviot shirt, with laced shoes.

He left the boy who was with him with the explanation that he was going to Bridgeport to visit some Farmers' Alliance people.

The Elk-celators.

The interest in the coming entertainment by the Wheeling Lodge of Elks increases every day, and it is very evident that when the sale of seats opens Saturday morning there will be an immediate sale that will clean off the sheet. The entertainment offered is ahead of the average minstrel entertainment. The city can well be proud of the talent shown in the performance, and the house ought to be packed at both performances. The boys have gone to a great deal of expense to make a creditable show, and they propose to have a street parade at noon next Tuesday which will outdo anything on the road, from Barnum down.

A Runaway Last Night.

Last night during the reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Hall, the newly married couple, at the residence of Mrs. Wilson, at Thirty-first and McCulloch streets, a team of horses attached to one of Louis Asmus's hacks started off from in front of the house. The driver, who was standing alongside, tried to stop the team and had his hand hurt. The horses ran about a square and were stopped by the upsetting of the carriage. The latter was badly broken up and one of the horses was seriously hurt.

WITH GREAT POMP

The Ceremony of the Investiture of the Khedive Is Conducted at Cairo.

CAIRO, April 14.—The investiture of the khedive took place to-day at the Abidin palace. Much delay has occurred in the reading of the firman of investiture. The sultan's special envoy, Ahmed Eyoub Pasha, and his suite arrived here from Constantinople on April 4. The ceremony to-day was celebrated with much pomp. All the British and Egyptian troops were massed in Abidin square, fronting the palace. Tribunes had been erected on the sides of the square and these were filled with officials and others. The khedive and ministers assembled on a dais in front of the palace, where they received Ahmed Eyoub Pasha, who arrived at 10 o'clock, accompanied by an escort of cavalry. The firman of investiture was read by an official, who also read a telegram from the sultan conferring upon the khedive the administration of the Sinai peninsula. Upon the conclusion of the reading the assembled troops thrice saluted the sultan and a band played the Turkish anthem. The city was decorated with flags and bunting, and the day was generally observed as a holiday. To-night the city will be illuminated.
